

Camping and learning

Luke Gronneberg

April 22, 2014

Wilderness Inquiry staff, l-r, Ronald Griswell and Nathan Sunnarborg, both of Minneapolis, and Project SEARCH Coordinator Patti Moore, of Sidney, watch as Tyler Branson, of Covington, and Jonathan Moyer, of Bradford, cook grilled cheese sandwiches at Lake Loramie State Park Tuesday. Branson and Moyer are enrolled in the Upper Valley Project SEARCH which helps people identified with a disability transition from high school to work. The program is teaming up with the organization Wilderness Inquiry today and tomorrow to bring students on a camping trip at Lake Loramie State Park. Wilderness Inquiry is a group that focuses on bringing people into nature that would normally get the chance. The camping trip was funded by Mitsubishi.

Link:<http://sidneydailynews.com/apps/pbcs.dll/article?AID=/20140422/news/304229958/>

© 2014 Civitas Media, All rights reserved