

Mitsubishi Electric US Cooling & Heating Division Announces Shuji Morisaki as New Senior Vice President, General Manager

SUWANEE, Ga., April 9, 2013 –Mitsubishi Electric US Cooling & Heating Division,

America’s No. 1 selling brand of ductless cooling and heating systems, has named Shuji Morisaki as senior vice president, general manager.

In this role, Morisaki will position the Division for future success by continuing its strong commitment to the US ductless market. He is charged with managing and maintaining the productivity of the Division, sustaining the company’s leading position in the ductless industry and overseeing engineering and manufacturing operations specific to the Cooling & Heating Division.

“Mr. Morisaki has a clear understanding of the HVAC business, the U.S. market and the importance of the U.S. HVAC organization to Mitsubishi Electric Corporation,” says Katsuya Takamiya, president & CEO, Mitsubishi Electric US, Inc.. “I’m confident Mr. Morisaki’s experience and global perspective will play a key role in the continued growth of our organization.”

Morisaki has more than three decades of HVAC marketing experience with Mitsubishi Electric, including three years in the marketing department for the Mitsubishi Electric US Cooling & Heating Division. He began his career in 1981 at Wakayama Works in its air-conditioning marketing section. He then expanded his global management knowledge and experience by holding HVAC marketing positions in the Living Environment & Digital Media Equipment Group in Japan and Mitsubishi Electric Air Conditioning Systems Europe, Ltd. in Scotland. From 2008 to 2011, Morisaki served as president of the Spanish Branch, Mitsubishi Electric Europe, B.V., where he managed the operations of HVAC, audio-visual information and industrial equipment and systems businesses in the Spanish market. Most recently, Morisaki held the title of deputy GM and senior
